CCT College: Partnership at CCT College Dublin to Enhance the Culture of Academic Integrity: A Joint Staff-Student Presentation

This joint staff-student presentation explores how CCT College Dublin continues to enhance its culture of academic integrity through the lens of student partnership. In their presentation, Graham and Mariana will describe a number of activities that CCT staff have conducted in partnership with students over the past twelve months leveraging technology, sectoral engagement and other institution initiatives, to educate and empower learners and staff about new as well as existing challenges relating to academic integrity. The presentation will conclude with a description of how these institutional initiatives have been executed with a focus on open access. Institutional resources pertaining to academic integrity are shared via the institution's open access repository or via the use of Creative Commons licences with the aim of contributing to sector-wide knowledge sharing.

National Academic Integrity Network (NAIN) Keynote webinar: Academic Integrity – The Student Partnership Approach

Academic integrity is often framed to students in the context of helping them to improve their writing and referencing to avoid plagiarism. Although supporting students to have the foundational academic skills necessary for success is important and essential, any modern take on academic integrity needs to consider the whole academic community, the world in which academia operates and the ethical principles that are at the heart of the educational system.

This keynote presentation will examine how students can be directly included in the academic integrity discussion and how they can be encouraged and supported to take active roles in future developments. Examples will be given considering how students can be involved in academic integrity decision making processes, how students can champion academic integrity within their own institution and beyond, and how students can operate as research partners looking to address emerging academic integrity challenges. The intention is to encourage institutions and staff at all levels, from university leaders through to teaching and professional services staff, to drive real change in partnership with the student body.

WEDNESDAY 20 OCTOBER

Dublin City University: Positive Ways to Promote Academic Integrity: A Multi-Stakeholder Approach to Creating a Culture of Integrity

You’ve heard it all: “Academic integrity isn’t my responsibility”; “it’s in the course syllabus, isn’t that enough?” or “I don’t have time to talk about academic integrity in my course”. These narratives are not only unhelpful for our students, but they also prevent cultures of integrity from developing at our institutions. Join us to learn more about how to create a positive culture of academic integrity, not only among students, but across your entire institution. We talk about how and why academic integrity goes beyond student conduct and involves multiple stakeholders in different and complementary ways. Finally, you’ll come away with concrete ideas to implement quickly to jumpstart a long-term commitment across the institution to sustaining a culture of ethics.

2 European Network for Academic Integrity

This session is taking place under the National Forum’s seminar funding 21/22.

International Center for Academic Integrity (ICAI): Live broadcast with a global group of students discussing academic integrity and contract cheating.
